STANDING UP FOR YOU

Show Racism the Red Card need your support

Show Racism the Red Card (SRtRC) is the UK's anti-racism educational charity, established in 1996. The campaign works with over 50,000 young people in the UK annually.

“We should have a united community which is why for me, Show Racism the Red Card, is a fantastic organisation.... perhaps the most important organisation that we are involved in. Show Racism the Red Card ... is fantastic because it is my view that the only way you can kick racism out of football is if you kick racism out of the community.”

Len McCluskey, General Secretary, Unite the Union

“SRtRC believe that as a society we must continue to stand up against the kind of prejudicial incidents reported in the press ... and not allow a media narrative to suggest that racism and discrimination are somehow an inevitable consequence to the decision to leave the European Union. In the eyes of some of those who hold racist views, the referendum result legitimised these opinions... However, those racist ideas were already there. That's why SRtRC is in its 20th year of existence. Racism grows and left unchallenged can escalate.”

Gav Sutherland, Campaign Coordinator, SRtRC
